

Joe Gosney

Hello! I'm Joe, Dad to Eve (15 years old), Huw (13 years old) and married to Jane. We've lived in lovely South Northamptonshire for the last 6 years in Blakesley. Originally I am from rural Sussex where I grew up in a small village very similar to Syresham and attended the local primary school where around 60 local children made up the numbers.

Because my family has moved a couple of times over the last decade we've experienced about four different primary schools and I've got first hand experience of the best and worst of them. I am a believer that academic contracting between teachers, parents and pupils around realising potential is at the heart of a great school. This has to be enabled by clear goals and excellent communication. I've first hand experience of how that happened with my kids and specifically how it helped my son grow in confidence and become a top achiever, having achieved only mediocrity previously.

My desire as a Governor is about connecting and contributing to the community that is helping my children to grow into talented and responsible adults and to share our family experiences of primary education to help others.
